LANDON CARRIES ONLY TWO STATES: MAINE, VERMONT!

Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

TUESDAY'S election was more nearly unanimous than any in the whole history of the United States. Mr. Roosevelt commands 46 of the 48 states in his successful bid for reelection. His electoral vote seems certain to be 523, with only 8 for Landon. Oother so-called "landslides" in American political history are dwarfed by comparison.

1 3/4 Millions for the Year's Cotton Crop in Hempstead

22,000 Bales This Year Will Yield Total of $1,752,080

UP A DOLLAR A BALE Market Rises 50 Cents to Dollar on Roosevelt's Re-Election

This year's cotton crop will bring Hempstead county producers 1 1/4 million dollars, practically complete ginning figures disclosed here Wednesday.

William H. Etter, reporter for the Bureau of the Census, reported total ginnings of 20,072 bales prior to October 18, as compared with 7,593 bales to the same date last year.

Authoritative estimates place the total county yield this year at 22,000 bales. At an average price of 12 cents per pound, and at an average of 522 pounds per bale, the proceeds per bale will run $62.64 for the staple alone, plus $17.00 for seed—a total of $79.64 per bale.

This gives a total income from Hempstead county cotton this year of $1,752,080.

Cotton Gains Dollar

NEW ORLEANS.—(AP)—Cotton jumped 50 cents to nearly a dollar a bale at the opening Wednesday.

Some saw in the sharp advance a reflection of the overwhelming Roosevelt victory, indicating a continuation of the crop restriction program for American cotton.

Borah Re-Elected by Idaho Voters

Veteran Independent Republican Runs Neck-and-Neck With F. D.

BOISE, Idaho.—(AP)—Senator William E. Borah, running ahead of a jagging Republican ticket, pulled away from his Democratic opponent, Gov. C. Ben Ben Ross, in returns reaching toward record proportions in Idaho Tuesday night.

With 41 of the state's 793 precincts heard from, the 71-year-old dean of the United States Senate had received 4,139 votes, Ross 2,983.

President Roosevelt led Gov. Alf M. Landon in the same precincts 4,547 to 2,734. William Lemke, Union party, had 55 votes.

Borah was noted to have run, under the Republican banner, almost neck-and-neck in vote totals with President Roosevelt, topping the Democratic column.

Mayor Barzilla W. Clark of Idaho Falls, champion of municipal power, forged ahead of his Republican opponent, Frank L. Stephan, Twin Falls lawyer and stockman, in the race for governor. Returns from 17 precincts gave Clark 1,617 votes, Stephan 1,162. V. A. Verhei of Sagle, Union party, had 15.

Turned Brown By Brown Turner

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—(Special)—By popular demand, Mr. Roosevelt and the New Deal will be with us for four more years but the Republicans couldn't be named postmaster for if the Democrats had lost they wouldn't even have had a Supreme Court to fall back on. The Republicans couldn't be named postmasters anyway unless they can read and write and it is quite a bother and takes up a lot of time to acquire these accomplishments.

So now we can turn our attention to football, turkey, Santa Claus and Congress and ways and means of cabalizing on to some sort of government check before the cash runs out because the Democrats are going to make us go to work if we don't watch out.

Amendments, Acts Apparently Win on Tuesday's Vote

Majorities Favor All of Them From 3-to-2 to 2-to-1

SWEEP FOR PARTY Usual Democratic Majority Here—All 5 Measures Approved

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The Associated Press tabulations on the state-wide referendum at 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon showed as follows for 855 out of 2,963 precincts:
Amendment No. 22: For 52,036; against 14,659.
Amendment No. 23: For 40,850; against 26,032.
Amendment No. 25: For 44,519; against 20,752.
Act No. 1: For 42,127; against 25,642.
Act No. 3: For 55,657; against 12,152.

Wednesday Noon Report

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Majorities mounted steadily Wednesday for all referendum items on the Arkansas general election ballot; with more than one-third of the state vote tabulated by the Associated Press at noon Wednesday.

Act No. 3, proposing revision of the criminal code, led the referendum list. On 660 out of 2,963 precincts the vote stood: 44,031 for No. 3; and 9,276 against No. 3.

The vote on the other measures was:
Amendment No. 22: For 40,776; against 10,976.
Amendment No. 23: For 31,866; against 20,197.
Amendment No. 25: For 36,043; against 15,038.
Act No. 1: For 32,602; against 20,857.

Democratic Sweep

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—President Roosevelt led the list of Democratic majorities returned by Arkansas, but the Democratic gubernatorial nominee, Carl Bailey, and Senate Democratic Leader Joe Robinson approximated the presidential totals.

In 601 precincts Roosevelt polled 48,837 votes; Landon 8,936; Norman Thomas 141; Browder 46; and Lemke 4.

For the United States Senate 569 precincts showed: Robinson 46,411; Ledbetter, Republican, 7,564; Claude C. Williams, Socialist, 416.

For governor, 568 precincts showed: Carl Bailey 47,922; Osro Cobb, Republican, 11,881.

Farmers Reaps Dividends
TAHLEQUAH, Okla.—(AP)—Soil building paid big dividends to O. M. Wilcox, Cherokee county farmer. Wilcox, whose farm ten years ago was partly sub-marginal, terraced the land, rotated crops, utilized manures to build up the worn out acreage. Four years ago he averaged 50 bushels of corn an acre. This year despite slight rainfall, he produced 1,017 bushels of oats on an 18-acre field. Wilcox said he always used the best seeds available and pastured his grain crops as little as possible.

But King Carol Stoutly Refuses to Give Up "My Little Friend"

Not only history but current happenings furnish heart-stirring precedent for the romance of King Edward VIII and Mrs. Wallis Simpson. The history-making love affair of King Carol of Rumania, who wed Zizi Lambria and once renounced his throne for red-headed Magda Lupescu, are the subject of Willis Thornton's concluding story of "When a King Loves—".

If petticoat influence on kings and rulers seems a thing of the powdered and periwigged past, remember that within a matter of weeks, 500,000 angry people have paraded in protest against a royal favorite.

The streets of Bucharest, capital of Rumania, were filled with a milling crowd of members of the Peasant Party shouted: "Lupescu must go!" And a red-headed woman was the cause of it all.

Of her, former Premier Maniu said: "As long as Mme. Lupescu remains in Rumania, nobody will be able to accomplish anything good. Through her meddling in politics, 13 governments have fallen."

Roosevelt Gets 523 Electoral Votes, to Only 8 for Landon

President's Popular Plurality to Reach Astounding Figure of 9 Million Votes

By the Associated Press

The Roosevelt landslide that shook the nation left but two states clinging to Republicanism Wednesday. Maine and Vermont alone clutched the beaten banner of Alfred M. Landon.

New Hampshire, after marching with him all Tuesday night, finally turned into the victorious columns of Roosevelt Wednesday morning to give the president a narrow lead.

All the other states already had given the Democratic presidential ticket shouting majorities in the electoral college and sent new recruits to previously top-heavy list of Democratic senate and house members. The apparent electoral vote stood at 523 for Roosevelt and 8 for Landon. The New Deal plurality of popular votes seemed likely to approach 9 million.

Democratic Lead in Congress Gains

Record Majorities of Last Session Will Be Surpassed

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The mid-morning flood-tide of election returns apparently was sweeping toward Washington Wednesday a record-shattering Democratic-majority in both houses of congress.

A continuation of trends would give the Democrats more than the 70 in the senate and the 321 house seats which they commanded the last session—the highest majorities of any party in history.

Available tabulations disclosed that the Democrats won 17 senate seats and were leading in the battle for 11 more. The Democrats held 246 and the Republicans 47 of the house memberships on which decisions had been recorded.

Democratic Governors
WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Election returns showed Wednesday that the Democrats had captured at least 13 of 33 governorships at stake and were leading for 13 more.

The Republicans were victorious only in Vermont and New Hampshire.

Conceded by Landon

TOPEKA, Kan.—(AP)—Gov. Alf M. Landon conceded the re-election of President Roosevelt early Wednesday.

In a message given to the press in a hotel after the Republican nominee had retired for the night Landon congratulated Roosevelt as follows:

"The President, Hyde Park, N. Y. The nation has spoken. Every American will accept the verdict, and work for the common cause of the good of our country. That is the spirit of democracy. You have my sincere congratulations."

Roosevelt Sweeps New York
NEW YORK.—(AP)—With more than half of New York state's votes counted, President Roosevelt held a 600,000 plurality over Governor Landon at midnight Tuesday. Totals for 4,683 of the state's 8,950 districts were:

Roosevelt ..... 1,687,590
Landon ..... 1,075,733

An upsurge of Republican votes outside New York city sent Governor Landon into the lead in upstate counties but the president maintained a three to one ratio in the metropolis.

The upstate count, with 2,533 districts out of a total of 5,151 was:
Roosevelt ..... 704,151
Landon ..... 734,265

The Family Doctor

Overdoses of Medicine Frequently Cause Dangerous Drug Poisoning

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygieia, the Health Magazine.

Besides food, human beings frequently are poisoned by various types of drugs. These may get into the body in various ways, sometimes through taking an overdose of a medicine, either purposely or by accident.

There are cases on record of children who died from strychnine poisoning because they ate large amounts of candied cathartic tablets distributed as samples. Sometimes people take overdoses of medicines for sleeping or for relieving pain.

Occasionally food may be contaminated by poisonous substances, such as antiseptics or insect powders. People have been poisoned by nicotine sprays used on plants and by arsenic and lead used in insect sprays.

In any case of poisoning, certain steps should be taken at once. First, try to find out the nature of the poison that has been taken.

An empty bottle or package on the table, or the presence of some of the poison on the tablecloth, the floor, or the clothing may indicate the cause of the symptoms from which the person suffers.

A doctor always smells the breath and examines the mouth of a person who has been poisoned. Certain poisons leave characteristic burns or stains on the skin. The person has taken the poison accidentally, he will usually be willing to tell all about the trouble, provided he is sufficiently conscious to talk rationally.

If the doctor suspects poisoning, he will give an appropriate antidote as soon as possible. Before the doctor arrives, however, it is well to give the patient white of eggs, milk, or strong tea, which are antagonistic to many poisons.

To get as much of the poison as possible out of the system, no time should be lost in making the victim vomit. This can be done either by tickling the back of the throat, by giving a cup of warm water with salt, or by washing out the stomach with a stomach tube. A teaspoonful of salt, dissolved in lukewarm water and thoroughly stirred, is given the patient every three or four minutes, he soon will vomit profusely, and enough water will be drawn into the stomach and intestines from the blood to wash out the stomach thoroughly.

The person who has been poisoned is likely to suffer from shock. One of the steps is to treat this shock with methods usually used in fainting cases. The person should lie flat in bed, and be kept thoroughly warm; and his general strength should be sustained by appropriate measures.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

Boys Will Be Boys—Even in London

LONDON.—Forgive me if I seem to have deserted the children for the moment. I haven't indeed; but when one goes visiting, one becomes saturated with sights and sounds and it must echo in one's work.

I can not write on complexes and discipline very well with my wings spread in flight and my feet off the earth. I have looked everywhere for little examples of this and that to write home about, but in the London I have seen, there are no children to speak of. They live away from the center of town naturally, and the center of this town is quite some place for size.

Oh, yes, I saw some boys from Westminster School. They wore top hats and wide white collars and long trousers. Slicked up no end. You would never believe that up to some few years ago, their fellows had carved their initials all over the soft marble of kings and queens in the great Abbey. Even noses are gone here and there. And the Coronation Chair bears the share in the alphabet owned by Dickie Jones and Johnny Smith.

One day, someone woke up to the fact that boys will be boys, and now the young blades are barred from the great church. And the throne is carefully guarded. It is six hundred years old, oak, with a compartment under the seat for the huge rock called the Great Stone of Scone, the former coronation seat of the kings of Scotland. Went out to the Caledonian Market yesterday. Out of Tottenham Court Road past King's Cross Station and St. Pancras Station. Felt like Sherlock Holmes. The Caledonian Market is some place and unlike anything else I have ever seen. Brother, if you need a dime, you just lift the old clock off the mantle, or go up attic and get out Graggina's old suds or the worn-out matress, and tote them to market on a Friday. You will find room in the fifty acres to spread your wares on the ground and wait for buyers, who will come, have no doubt.

Everything is sold there from old shoes and gloves to the finest of old Georgian silver. I never saw so much silver in my life. But this is largely handled by dealers, and I can't say they are giving it away easily.

But I shall forget the Market. What I cannot forget, and the incident that prompts this story, is the little band of one-legged veterans who were singing on Market Street as we came out. I heard the music long before I saw them. Some heavenly host seemed to be lifting its voice above the smoky air. Never, within open walls have I heard anything so divinely sweet. And the tune, the tune! It plays itself on my typewriter and fills my room even after twenty odd hours. It swells higher and higher and spreads itself over the roof of the city. Perhaps the quality of the air gave it permanency. But it followed for blocks after we had passed.

A tune stays in the heart long after other sights and sounds are forgotten. That and one other melody will remain with me always. The other is the morning hymn sung in the old church across the street from our hotel. The high clear voice of the tenor wailed me each day. It is always the same song. It resembles the tune sung by the soldiers. Perhaps there are amplifiers to carry the music outside, because the walls are solidly built. Anyway, I hear him and the details do not matter. London is full of music. Every place you eat, large or small, everywhere you go, there is music. They don't save it for their radios. They say with music.

HOLLYWOOD

Filmland Menials, Tradesmen Get Studio News Right Off Tap

HOLLYWOOD.—What this department needs is a house in Beverly Hills and a garriolous coach. A chauffeur, a maid, and gardener would be desirable, too. Then, by eavesdropping around the servants' quarters, I could collect screen colony news before it even hits the studios or reaches the night club gossip route.

For there are few secrets that can be kept from servants and tradesmen. Two days before Greta Taylor was notified by executives that she's been starred with Greta Garbo in "Camille," a leg o' bootblack told him the plan.

The shoeshiner, busy in the front offices, had heard the decision being made.

For advance information on studio affairs—sometimes affecting his own pictures—Groucho Marx goes home to dinner. His wife tells him. She in turn, has garnered the news from her cook, who knows the maids and cooks of dozens of pictures bosses and players.

Edward Erwin, often a celluloid reporter, but never a real-life scribbler, says he could do daily gossip column just by talking with his Japanese gardener. This fellow takes care of the places of a dozen stars, and has country-men-pals who work around the homes of practically every celebrity in Hollywood. You'd be surprised how observant and interested these fact-turn Orientals can be.

Clearing House
Los Angeles' Harlem, on Central Avenue, is a sort of clearing house for the Hollywood lowdown. When personal maids and chauffeurs get to kicking up their heels in the hot spots, second-hand scandal is thicker than reef-smoke and news flows with the tipping of each shorty of gin.

Days before Marlene Dietrich's plans were known in Hollywood, a negro newspaper announced she was going to Europe. The same paper was aware of the first flutterings of romance between Jean Harlow and William Powell.

While the major fan rags were talking of an early wedding between Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, the black belt well knew that Miss MacDonald and Mr. Eddy were at best good friends, and that the actress' heart interest was Gene Raymond.

Discreet Tradesmen
Florists and jewelers, and their deliverymen could electrify the gossip-loving colony any day in the week by telling what they know. No "surprise" wedding is a surprise to the man who, days in advance, engraves the ring for the occasion. Flower men can spot a budding romance with the first consignment of orchards.

But jewelers, florists and other tradesmen know that their livelihood in Hollywood depends on their discretion. Stars patronize only those whose silence is assured.

Clark Gable, an enthusiastic gadgeteer in the automotive line, chats with numerous mechanics and salesmen. He knows which players are buying new cars—and which ones are delinquent in their payments.

Madge Evans does her own marketing. After talking with grocers, she calls her friends and ribs 'em about the dinner parties they're planning to give.

Learns She's Wed

I'm told that part of the job of beauty parlor operators is gathering disseminating gossip. But his isn't all.

SALUTE TO LOVE

By Rachel Mack

BEGIN HERE TODAY
KATE and CAROLINE MEED live on a farm, Mead Meadows, with their indolent, lovable scoundrel father, MORGAN SAM MEED, and two old Negro servants, ALTHY and ZECHE. Kate is engaged to MORGAN'S PRINCE, who meets her for FIVE FLOWERS, beautiful and wealthy.

Major Meed takes the farm to JEFF HOWARD, a bitter young mountaineer. Kate later leaves for taking their home and treats him insolently, but he falls in love with her. Kate, seeing her beloved, Brown Boy, to a neighbor, later she finds that Jeff Howard has bought the horse and her resentment toward Jeff increases.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXV
WHEN Saturday came Caroline got out baking materials and spread them over the kitchen table as usual.

Walking into the kitchen when Caroline was sitting there, Kate looked at her accusingly. "That's not for Jeff Howard, is it?"

"Why, yes," Caroline answered. "I thought I'd make him a butter-scotch pie and coconut cake, for a change of flavors. You needn't help me. Althy's going to mix the butter and sugar."

Kate said, "We'll make nothing more in this house for Jeff Howard."

Caroline saw that Kate was in earnest. She shrugged and began to put away flour and baking powder and cake pans. "All right," she said, "I'll send him word we're going out of business. But I think it's something like the poor man who said he intended to hang himself and somebody asked him what he'd do for a rope. He said he'd make it out of pride, because pride's stronger than hemp."

Kate might have been benefited by this fable if something had not occurred to drive it from her mind. On the living room table was an open newspaper which her grandfather had just laid down. Glancing through it before starting to dust the room, she came on the announcement of FIVE FLOWERS' engagement to Morgan Frontis. The wedding would be in October.

That evening at supper she was conscious of tender solicitation on the part of Caroline and Morgan Meed. She said, "For goodness sake, stop watching me with soiled-boiled eyes! I'm bearing up very nicely, thank you. I was expecting it. Only I thought they'd clope and not bother with a formal engagement."

Major Meed poured skimmed milk over a baked apple and remarked with admiring philosophy, "You'll find yourself better off without him, Kate. Just the way I find myself better off without Hyacinth's croon. Too rich a mixture."

Kate laughed and the tension was relieved. "I suppose the town's buzzing," she said. "I believe I'll go to church tomorrow. Looking my best. Wearing a perfectly pleasant expression."

"That's the spirit," said her grandfather. "Take one of your other beads with you."

Kate and Caroline exchanged amused glances. It was one of Major Meed's fond and galling illusions that countless young men were in love with his granddaughters, ready to kneel at the crook of a finger.

YET Kate did have an escort next day. She encountered Johnnie Baird coming from the postoffice, and carelessly invited him to accompany her.

"Don't care if I do," Johnnie decided. "Haven't been to church since Easter. By the way, do I look all right?"

"You look fine," Kate told him. "But let's not be late."

It was a comfort, she found, to be escorted to the family pew by Johnnie. After all, he had been rather attentive to her once and she had been fond of him, before Morgan had supplanted him.

"Could I," she wondered, while Johnnie's good tenor voice rang out over a hymn book, "manage to catch him again? ... And could I fall for him if I did? It would save my pride. ... Johnnie's kind. Not a pauper, either. ..."

Yet when that night, Johnnie came driving out to Rickety House, bringing Cynthia Chenaunt and two young men and melons enough for a party, Kate felt no elation. "Here I am," Johnnie's eyes told her, "ready to begin again where we left off—ready to step into Morgan's shoes."

While the others arranged themselves on pillows on the porch steps, Kate and Johnnie walked down the star-lit road. "I've always had a weakness for country roads in the dark," he said. "What smells so sweet?"

"August lilies," Kate told him. "There's a clump in bloom just over by the fence. Don't pay any attention to them. They'd make a rock sentimental."

Johnnie lit a cigaret and said huskily, "I could get that way if you'd let me—some time, Johnnie."

"Some other time, Johnnie," Kate said quickly. "Not tonight. Let's just be crazy tonight. Let's make limericks, the way we used to."

"Limericks!" Johnnie protested. "Why did I ever get myself a reputation for those things?" A horse neighed in the pasture. "Is that Brown Boy?" Johnnie wanted to know.

"No," Kate replied shortly. "Go on, Johnnie. Make a limerick. Make one about—about—King Carol of Rumania."

Kate laughed and the tension was relieved. "I suppose the

Kings Carol Risks

ments and four elections have followed on each other's heels. Mme. Lupescu is responsible for almost every evil in this country.

King Carol bears the distinction of having lost a crown, partly because of his attachment for Mme. Lupescu, and then of having regained it. If in response to mounting protests against the red-haired favorite who rules his court, he should lose his crown again, then the all-time record will have been broken.

Lupescu Is Twice Divorced

Mme. Lupescu was born simply Mad-da Wolff, daughter of a Jewish drug commission merchant. Magda has told of first meeting the prince romantically when they both were children at a lawn party given by King Ferdinand. The actual beginning of romance between the young Crown Prince Carol and the bronze-haired beauty is not definitely known. It did not take place, however, until after the dashing young prince had sowed a considerable crop of royal wild oats over the Balkans. They included a morganatic marriage with Zizi Lambrino, who bore him a son, King Ferdinand and Queen Marie engineered an annulment of that one.

Mme. Lupescu had herself been married twice to army officers, but divorced the second of them when she resumed her childhood admiration for Carol, whom she had met at a military ball. It was then that she Rumanized her name of Wolff into Lupescu. The king and queen were furious, and violent quarrels shook the court. In 1921 they engineered Carol's marriage to Princess Helen of Greece, whom he did not love. Carol continued to take his fun where he found it.

Fled to France With Favorite

As a result of court bitterness, Carol left Rumania and sojourned for several years with Mme. Lupescu in France. It was announced that he had resigned his rights to the throne. Meanwhile Ferdinand had died and Queen Marie (she who burned the United States after the World War), was virtually ruling as regent, while Carol's young son Michael nominally was the crown.

During this exile, Carol divorced Helen, and kept in touch with Rumanian affairs. Seizing an opportunity during the summer of 1930, Carol made a dramatic flight to Bucharest, and aided by army officers loyal to him, seized the crown from the head of his own son, and the regency from his mother, Queen Marie. It was given out at that time that Carol had announced the fiery-haired Lupescu, who was to remain an unconsoled exile in France or Switzerland.

All went well for some months, with the Rumanian peasantry convinced that the charmer was gone from court life for good. But lo and behold, suddenly Mme. Lupescu popped up in Bucharest again, and it became apparent that Carol's renunciation of love had been merely a ruse.

Michael Is Against Her

Immediately the "Lupescu issue" began to develop, and has been growing more intense as the months pass. Demonstrators have not hesitated to parade before Mme. Lupescu's residence with banners warning her of the fate of Queen Draga of Serbia, who was slain with her husband, King Alexander, by their own officers in 1917.

This opposition to "the red-headed witch" has mounted to the point where one effort has already been made on her life, and 13 men were imprisoned this summer in a second alleged plot on the lives of both Carol and Lupescu. Student demonstrations against the "Camarilla" or inner court circle, are frequent.

Three groups, the students, the Iron Guard, and the "All for the Fatherland" organization, are sworn enemies of "the reign of Lupescu."

The anti-Lupescu feeling has been fed by rising Nazi propaganda in Rumania, and its anti-Jewish principles have found fuel in Magda's racial origins. Prince Michael is himself reported to be a Nazi in sympathy and to be bitter against Mme. Lupescu. Rumania is a whirlpool of hectic politics, swirling about the titan hair of the reigning favorite.

Her Beauty Has Faded

Between 35 and 40 years old, Magda Lupescu is scarcely a great beauty today. She is reticent, and few in Bucharest have ever set eyes on her. She lives simply, especially in recent years when she has been combating a tendency toward overweight.

Her father removed from their native Passy, and established himself in Bucharest near the royal palace, and critics are not lacking to suggest that the way to lucrative contracts has not been made any tougher for him because of his daughter's position. Magda herself is reputed to be wealthy, and to care for relatives scattered all over Rumania.

King Carol has himself repeatedly denied the story that he renounced his right to the throne because of Magda. He blames internal politics. And he has also made it plain that he has no idea of giving up the copper-haired siren.

"The truth about my little friend," he once said, "is that she is the other half of my being, the other half of my brain. She stood by me as nobody else did. Her sympathy and understanding was a thing I was entirely unable to do without."

As it was in the days of bluff King Hal, so it is today. The pen may be mightier than the sword, but a pair of dark eyes or the ready understanding of a sympathetic woman may be mightier still.

(The End)

Plans are being made in north China to build a network of canals linking all the rivers of the province of Hopei with the Grand canal to expend cheap transportation facilities.

"Craig's Wife" New Saenger Film

Rosalind Russell and John Boles on Screen Wednesday

Rosalind Russell and John Boles, as Mr. and Mrs. Walter Craig, will be seen in the picturization of George Kelly's famous Pulitzer Prize-winning play, "Craig's Wife," showing Wednesday only at the Saenger.

The stars are supported in lesser roles by an imposing cast including Billie Burke, Jane Darwell, Dorothy Wilson.

"Craig's Wife," as drama lovers will recall, is the story of an implacable wife who subjugated her every emotion to attain what she considered the most important factor in every woman's life—complete independence. She sweeps so relentlessly towards her goal that finally she wins her independence but loses everything else in life worth having.

Millions of readers roared at "Old Hutch" when the story appeared in a national magazine. They and additional millions will laugh when they see Wallace Beery in the title role of the film version opening Thursday at the Saenger theater.

The "laziest man in the world" finds $100,000 in stolen bills—and he can't find a way to spend it! That's the predicament in which Wallace Beery finds himself in at the Saenger in "Old Hutch" Thursday and Friday.

Green grave. The Woman's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor conducted an industrial study which reveals that 75 per cent of the daughters, against 50 per cent of the sons, contribute 50 per cent of their earnings to family support, while 60 per cent of the daughters and 35 per cent of the sons gave their complete earnings.

The women received the lower salaries throughout, on the assumption that men, not women, are providers. If women earn as much money as men, she deserves to receive it!

Equal Pay for Equal Responsibilities. The Woman's Bureau, continuing with Mrs. Richardson's survey found that of 38,000 gainfully employed married women, 21 per cent were the sole bread-winners of their families, 49 per cent were one of two bread-winners, and 30 per cent assisted materially.

This, then, is an unpleasant problem but one which women must face. Either our responsibilities must be lessened, or we must receive equal rates for equal services. We have ourselves to blame for the present predicament. We have offered to work at lower levels of salaries. Employers have given employment to women because of this fact.

"We will be out of jobs if we object," women may say. Men will take them from us! That, then, is the problem. Whether to run the risk of losing them and thus becoming dependent on man—or the charities—or to go on being undervalued, that is the question.

For a long, long time in human history woman was recorded as a necessary adjunct to man. Now she stands as a personality, who pays her

WITH THE LADIES

By Helen Welshimer

Women Have Equality in Almost Everything Except Pay Envelope

Man can not live by bread alone, a great teacher once observed. However, he can not live without it, either, and the community owes a manna long since having ceased its descent from the fruitful skies—it becomes imperative that he have something with which to purchase it. Therefore, the problem of obtaining adequate wages, in this age when women work outside the home is as vital to women as to men.

Here, then, is one of the issues which the women of 1936 must face. One hundred years ago, if she had no income outside the household money given her by her husband or father, she had no responsibilities, either. But today—

Eudora Ramsay Richardson's recent book, "The Influence of Men—Incurable," provides an interesting insight into woman's economic status. The National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, in co-operation with Bryn Mawr College, made a survey showing that 83.6 per cent of these canvassed were taking care of dependents. Older women had the heavier load. Two-thirds of these former Bryn Mawr women were single as against one-sixth who were married and one-sixth who were widows. Of the single women 60 per cent had dependents; of the married women, 70 per cent; of the widows, 70 per cent.

Must Support Dependents on Lower Salaries. "She has only herself to support. She's a woman! That's why she shouldn't get as much money as a man with a wife and children," the plea goes forth from masculine circles. Very well!

Following that line of reasoning, salaries should be paid according to the number of dependents, whether the wage-earner is a man or woman, not according to ability and income earned. Yet—let any bachelor approve a cut merely because he didn't marry! However, if the matter of dependents does enter, surely woman deserves a break with man.

On unmarried daughter, statistics show, must bear her share of household expenses much more often than an unmarried son. He, you see, may be saving for marriage. Nobody thinks that she may have herself to support until she rolls into a comfortable in her kitchen which she calls her utility cabinet. The top is used for a working surface. There are two doors in front opening up two big shelves. The shelves are used for kitchen utensils and extra groceries which have to be bought at the store. Scrap lumber and nails on hand were used in making the cabinet. New hinges were bought costing 10c. Twenty cents was spent for latches.

Cabinets for dishes may be built into a fairly large dining room, and corner closets are easily added. Drawers or sliding trays for linen and silver can be designed to fit into the lower part of a corner cabinet. Mrs. Ida A. Benton, Extension economist in home management, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture, suggests.

Build-in cabinets and storage closets in the kitchen for such articles as pots and pans, canned goods, and cleaning equipment will save many steps, Mrs. Benton points out.

Built-in Cabinets Built-in equipment is an important convenience in many Hempstead county homes. Cabinets, "breakfast nook" tables and benches, and ironing boards are among some of the items most frequently found. Many of these conveniences can be made from scrap lumber at small expense.

Mrs. J. K. Green of Ozan Home Demonstration club, Hempstead county, used furniture on hand to make built-in cabinets in her kitchen. An old kitchen cabinet, kitchen table, dish cabinet, and a few pieces of scrap lumber were fixed into built-in kitchen cabinet work. Legs and tops were removed from the furniture. All cabinet work was put on the inside wall of the house. The cabinet was put in a frame at one end of the kitchen with the original top on the wall above it. The side-board was used at the other end with the dish cabinet over it. A sink was added in the center. More storage space was made to fill in extra space. Metal covering was used for the working surface. Nails and hinges were other articles purchased. The kitchen was papered and woodwork refinished. Cost of material and labor amount to $25.

Mrs. Ruby Long of Bright Star Home Demonstration club made a bed spread using 24 fertilizer sacks. The spread is very original in design. The sacks were sewed together with big seams. The big seams were raveled out leaving a tufted effect at all seams. An extra piece was sewed around the spread and raveled out then tied to make a fringe. She also made a table cloth of 4 fertilizer sacks, brier-stitching the seams and embroidering a design in the center.

ALL'S NOT GOLD SACRAMENTO, Calif. —(AP)—California's multi-million-dollar navel orange crop starts moving to market in November, and with it moves a warning to persons of small means not to mistake the gold of oranges for the gold at the end of the rainbow.

Each year when it gets chilly back east, Californians get inquiries from friends who think it would be nice to put their small savings in "a few acres of oranges" and lounge around in the sunshine the rest of their lives. Quick to caution the 1936 hopefuls, the Pacific Rural Press says: "The record of the last five years shows an orange grower needs 20 acres to make a living of from $1,600 to $3,000 net per year. As a general thing, the 5 to 10-acre ranch is not enough to keep a man busy or furnish a good living."

Bobkittens and Blevins Clash at 7:30 P. M.

Second Meeting of 2 Teams This Year

First Contest Here Several Weeks Ago Ended in 6 to 6 Tie

Battling to a 6 to 6 draw here several weeks ago, the Blevins High School football team and the Hope B-team will clash again Wednesday night in an effort to settle their difference.

The game will be played in the Hope Stadium and will start promptly at 7:30 o'clock.

A large delegation of Blevins supporters are expected to accompany Coach Charles Teeter's team to Hope.

Admission will be 10 and 25 cents. Season tickets to regular Hope High School games will not be good Wednesday night.

Between halves the Seventh and Eighth graders of Hope will play a 15-minute game of "touch-ball."

As the Bobkittens prepared to meet Blevins, Head Coach Foy Hammons drilled his men on plays to be used against Prescott High School here Friday night.

The Bobcats came out of the Camden game in good shape and are expected to be in excellent condition against the Wolves in a renewal of gridiron warfare with Prescott.

The Wolves have won two games this year, holding victories over Childers and Stephens.

The probable starting lineups of the Hope-Blevins game here this Wednesday night:

| BOBKITTENS | HORNETS      |
|------------|--------------|
| Brady      | Stephens     |
| Brackman   | Left End     |
| Jobe       | Left Tackle  |
| Jewell     | Left Guard   |
| Watson     | Center       |
| Simpson    | Right Guard  |
| Turner     | Right Tackle |
| O. Jones   | Right End    |
| Aslin      | Quarterback  |
| Keith      | Right Half   |
|            | Fullback     |

Other Hope players expected to see action are Purdie, Bearden, Conway, H. Taylor and W. Taylor, Rogers and Parker.

Acts, Amendment Carry LITTLE ROCK—(A)—Normally sweeping majorities for the Democratic ticket, both state and national, mounted steadily in Wednesday's count of Tuesday's general election ballot.

The major interest swung to the five referendum proposals, all of which showed a favorable vote.

Roosevelt extended his advantage over Landon to seven to one. The count in 325 of the 2,003 precincts was: Roosevelt 26,323.

Landon 3,847.

Braddock Due to Post $5,000 Check

Champ Visiting in Spa Disregards Notices on Overdue Bond

NEW YORK—(A)—James J. Braddock is due to deposit a $5,000 check with the New York State Athletic Commission Wednesday, but there was no indication Tuesday night the money will be laid on the line.

The commission wants the check as evidence of the heavyweight champion's intentions of fighting Max Schmeling in a title bout next June.

The check is long overdue. Schmeling deposited his before returning to Germany after his scheduled September bout with Braddock was postponed, but the commission has had no luck with the firm of Braddock and Joe Gould.

Brig-Gen. John J. Phelan, chairman of the commission, has been firing telegrams into the New York headquarters of the champ calling his attention to Wednesday's date, but Tex Sullivan, Braddock's secretary said neither the title holder nor manager Joe Gould would be on hand.

Braddock is in Hot Springs, Ark., recuperating from an arthritis attack which caused postponement of the September fight and Gould is with him.

"Gould is due back the last of this week or the first of next and will take care of the check then," said Sullivan. "Braddock will stay in the south for another month."

Besides the matter of the check, Braddock also was ordered in Wednesday for a physical examination and general check-up.

Evidence that the champ is well on the road to complete recovery is seen in Gould's announcement that Braddock will fight an exhibition in Havana late in December with Jack McCarthy, Boston heavyweight and Braddock's partner on all his exhibition tours.

Unofficial tabulation of Tuesday's vote in Hempstead and Nevada counties was handicapped by failure of precinct officials to report their totals—but on the basis of six boxes in Hempstead and seven in Nevada it was apparent that both counties went almost solidly for the Democratic ticket, and all five referendum matters were given majorities.

Six precincts in Hempstead, including the following totals on the referendum matters:

Amendment No. 22: For 801; against 176.

Amendment No. 23: For 545; against 402.

Amendment No. 25: For 650; against 296.

Act No. 1: For 592; against 393.

Act No. 3: For 620; against 136.

Seven boxes in Nevada county, including the City of Prescott reported the usual landslide for the Democratic ticket but the exact figures weren't available at noon Wednesday.

The same seven Nevada boxes showed the following totals on the referendum matters:

Amendment No. 22: For 550; against 158.

Amendment No. 23: For 448; against 270.

Amendment No. 25: For 457; against 237.

Act No. 1: For 428; against 244.

Act No. 3: For 573; against 93.

Wholesome Respect for Wildcat Coach

Northwestern Mentor's Enemies Turns Friends After Victory

NEW YORK—(A)—The bishop's son set on a volcano but the force of his quiet genius turned it into a golden throne.

When Northwestern snapped Minnesota's remarkable winning streak in the mud and rain at Dwyer Stadium Saturday, Coach Lynn Waldorf silenced, perhaps forever, a rumbling alumni football volcano that threatened to bury him whole in the coaches' graveyard.

Probably no college football coach ever turned alumni suspicion, bitterness and jealousy into wholesome respect as quickly and definitely as Waldorf has at Northwestern University. His achievement in doing so rates far higher than his team's conquest over Minnesota.

After the campaign of 1934, the loyal alumni were split into two warring factions when Director of Athletics Kenneth "Tug" Wilson, long at odds with the university's prevailing gridiron master minding, fired popular Dick Hanley as coach and appointed Waldorf, son of a university trustee but a Syracuse graduate, as his successor.

Staunch friends of the deposed Hanley and critics of Wilson arose in rebellion, vowing to get Wilson's scalp and charging Waldorf got the job because his father was a trustee. Material didn't look very good for the coming year, but the quiet Waldorf, reporting from Kansas State where his team shattered Nebraska's long stranglehold to win the Big Six championship, stepped into the disquieting spot and made good with even a better showing than Hanley, no slouch as a football coach himself.

Griddler Never Saw Game

MENLO, Calif.—(A)—Although touted as a gridiron star as a result of standout performance in scrimmages, Irwin (Swivel-hips) Rodgers of Menlo junior college spent his first game on the bench. Coach Hal Duncker thought he ought to see at least one game of football before going into action.

Brought in from Hongkong, young Rodgers knew the game only from occasional flashes in the news reels.

No More 'No. 7'

COLORADO SPRINGS—(A)—There is no "lucky seven" on the Colorado college football squad any more. Earl (Dutch) Clark, only Colorado player ever to make the all-America team, wore No. 7 and when the former Tiger quarterback peeled off his black-and-gold jersey for the last time, it went into the trophy room and No. 7 went out of existence.

PLUGGING FOR REESE

Standing out in what we believe is one of the staunchest high school lines in the state, Hugh Reese, Co-Captain and peerless leader of the Bobcats, will get this column's vote for an end position when it comes time to select the mythical all-state eleven this year.

After looking over some of the strongest teams in the state, we pick Reese as the foremost candidate for an end-berth on the all-state eleven.

Reese is about everything that a coach dreams about. He stands more than six feet and weighs 169 pounds.

Captain Foy Hammons says Reese is the most determined player on the Hope High team, always alert and fighting for victory.

Reese's work, under dramatic circumstances, produced a cherished victory for the Bobcats in the El Dorado game here three weeks ago. That victory will probably remain the brightest spot in Reese's store of gridiron memories. It will also remain in the memories of many Hope football fans.

Supporters of the Bobcats will recall that Reese scored two of the three touchdowns against El Dorado. The last one was the winning touchdown in the closing minutes of play on a spectacular catch and a 70-yard dash that saw the Bobcat end really stretch out and outrun two Wildcats on his heels.

But when he crossed the goal no one was close.

Reese carried on his great work of pass catching against Nashville the following week. He accounted for two of Hope's five markers on sensational sagging, and furnished the spark for victory.

Against Camden last week Reese failed to score, but his defensive work stamped him as one of the bright spots in the game. Reese is a tireless worker, has a cool head and plays football intelligently. Reese is a senior. He will make some college coach a great end.

THE RAZZLE DAZZLE

The Razzle Dazzle brand of football, a mixture of intricate lateral and forward, will be put on exhibition here Friday night against the Prescott High School Curly Wolves, next foes of the Bobcats.

Unless Coach Foy Hammons changes his mind he will instruct the team to devote one quarter of this type of play. When the Bobcats get in possession, Spears, quarterback, will call for three straight passes. If they work for a first down, three more passes in succession can be expected.

This particular quarter will be a succession of the Razzle Dazzle in an effort to greater develop the team on the aerial game.

Provided that the Bobcats are able to roll up a comfortable lead, another quarter will be devoted to a certain brand of play. Coach Hammons does not want this style of play made public for the time being.

PAINTED PIGSKIN

Ever see a striped ball used in a football game?

Brigham Young University of Provo, Utah, used one in scoring a 33 to 0 win over Greeley State college the other day.

B. Y. U.'s players wore white jerseys, so a white ball was out. Greeley State's warriors wore brown pants and purple shirts, which made the regulation brownskin impractical.

So they compromised by painting white bands around a brown ball.

WAY CAMDEN SAW IT

Rumblings of discontent over the outcome of the Hope-Camden football game here last Friday night are expressed in a write-up of the game in the Camden News. More than a dozen football fans have dropped around to the office to take a squirt at the Camden paper. For the benefit of those interested we'll quote a few paragraphs from the paper:

"Hallow's 'n' hoodoo's arrived 24 hours early and descended upon the luckless Camden Panthers at Hope Friday night. At the end of the game the score was 6 to 0 in favor of the Hope Bobcats but you couldn't make all the 3,000 fans who saw the game believe that was right. Some biased Hope rooters perhaps will think Hope was the best team, but facts and figures prove otherwise. Prescott, Gurdon, and Nashville fans there en masse all pulling for Camden, together with about 500 Camden backers knew the Panthers were entitled to at least a draw."

"Fate seemed to have been storing up for that one game and the spooks, goblins, hants and all the witchcraft that is saved up from year to year, just to walk one out of 365 days, came down with one big swoop and the Panthers were left wailing. But Camden scored a touchdown in a convincing manner and they didn't get it. Hope scored one in the last minute for a pass frenzy and they did get it. That's the tale."

"Camden was on Hope's goal line for three quarters, twice in the first half. Hope never made a first down until the final quarter. The entire ball game was played inside Hope's 50-yard line save for a few minutes of the final 15. Camden got the jump and kept it until a referee's decision in the latter part of the last period went against them and robbed them of an 80-yard run by Kizzia for a score. That took the heart right out of as fighting a bunch of Panthers as Camden has ever had. On top of losing that long run the Panthers got a five-yard penalty. A punt out and Hope had the ball and then a touchdown with only a few minutes left to play."

Ball Carrier Needs Interference, But

Good One Inspires Unity in Blocking

Good Blocking Is Inspired When Team Mates Have Faith in Ball Carrier's Ability—Records Show That New Coaches Sweep Cleaner

By HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Sports Writer

NEW YORK—Any time a back starts to become famous, take a look at the man up front, or rather the men down field.

For every open field phenomenon there has been one or more clever interferers. Blockers ordinarily remain back in the shadows in a publicity way, but some of them actually became renowned as the result of paving the way for celebrated ball carriers.

Earl Britton ran in front of Red Harold Grange, for example. In the old days at Pittsburgh, Tommy Davis had Tommy Holleran clearing the way, and Gibby Welch had Jimmy Hagan.

Johnny Murrell took out would-be tacklers for Red Cagle and Army. Ernie Finkert enabled Orv Mohler to go places for Southern California, and Marty Brill was a big help to Marcy Schwartz when he wasn't lugging the leather himself for old Notre Dame.

Bones Hamilton gave Bobby Grayson a big hand at Stanford. Orzie Simmons hasn't looked quite as good at Iowa since Dick Crayne graduated.

A coach's trick is to get his entire team blocking. It has been the success of Bernie Bierman and Dr. Jack Sutherland along this line that accounts for the splendid records of the Minnesota and Pittsburgh varieties of recent years.

Good Ball Carrying Inspires Blocking

While ball carriers don't get very far without blocking, their individual brilliance inspires good blocking.

Dr. Sutherland says that because of the faith in Marshall Goldberg's ability to take care of himself in an open field, there has been a greater willingness on the part of all of his Pittsburgh boys to get the headline-chasing sophomore out in the open.

Various men have helped at various times. There is a certain unity when blockers realize that their efforts are not going to be wasted.

Bill Glassford comes around from his guard post to make timely blocks for Bulldog Quarterback Johnny Chickering, blasts away at ends because he knows that Goldberg will repay him by picking up plenty of yardage. Averell Daniel and Tony Matish, big tackles, block, too.

Against Ohio State, it was Chickering and Bill Stapulis, fullback, who opened the way for Harold Etchings' touchdown run. Stebbins is the fastest youngster on the Pittsburgh club. Chickering and Stapulis knew he would go places if given the opportunity.

The runner has to be as good as the interference to make thrilling runs possible. Goldberg has proved that he can make his own way, too. He is as dangerous when it comes to backing up in the open field.

Records Show That New Coaches Sweep Cleaner

There is ample evidence this fall that new coaches sweep cleaner, and that it doesn't take as long to install individual systems as was generally supposed by many.

Red Dawson has only a tie charged against his record at Tulane. Carl Snavely's sophomores are winning major games for Cornell for the first time in three campaigns and get stronger weekly. Tulane alone repelled Bear Wolf's North Carolina Tar Heels. Major Bob Neyland has accomplished wonders at Tennessee, where little was expected this trip.

Roosevelt Carries State of Kansas

On One-Seventh of Total Precincts F. D. Leads Landon

BULLETIN
The latest tabulation of the national vote by the Associated Press, Wednesday noon, apparently gives Kansas, home state of Republican Landon, to President Roosevelt.

TOPEKA, Kan., (AP)—President Roosevelt and Gov. Alf M. Landon waged a nip-and-tuck fight Tuesday night for the nine electoral votes of Kansas, Landon's home state.

The margin between them was so narrow the lead changed several times when returns from a predominately heavy Democratic or Republican county were tabulated.

Roosevelt held a narrow margin—55,684 of 54,317—on unofficial returns from 384 complete precincts of 2,690 in the state.

Landon, behind on the early tabulation of incomplete precincts, took a lead when complete precincts came in. Tabulation of precincts in Kansas City, Kan., a Democratic stronghold, tipped the lead to Roosevelt again.

Senator Arthur Capper, Republican seeking his fourth term, was ahead of his Democratic opponent, Omar B. Ketchum, 27,452 to 22,105 on returns from 171 complete precincts.

Will G. West, former private secretary to Landon, had a close race on his hands for the governorship. His lead over Walter Huxman, Democrat, on returns from 251 precincts was 38,780 to 36,019.

Sixth District of Arkansas Society Will Meet at Barlow

The Sixth Council District of the Arkansas Medical Society will convene at 10 a. m. Thursday in Hope for a one-day session that is expected to attract more than 100 physicians here from several counties of south-west Arkansas.

The meeting will be held at Hotel Barlow. Mayor Albert Graves will deliver the welcome address. Devotional will be given by the Rev. Fred Harrison, pastor of First Methodist church. The district is comprised of Hempstead, Miller, Howard, Little River, Fike, Polk and Nevada counties. Doctors in other counties over Arkansas have been invited.

The program includes addresses by four Dallas, Texas, physicians and Dr. P. B. Carrigan of Hope. The program: "Treatment of Syphilis," demonstrated by moving pictures—Dr. Everett C. Fox, Dallas, Texas.

"Treatment of Common Rectal Disorders"—Dr. Curtice Rosser, Dallas, Texas.

Luncheon 12 noon. 1:30 p. m. "Common Complaints with Reference to the Heart as Encountered in the Office"—Dr. Robert M. Barton, Dallas, Texas.

"Some Common Infections Related to Nutritional Disturbances in Infants"—Dr. Jack F. Perkins, Dallas, Texas.

"Albinism, Case Exhibit"—Dr. P. B. Carrigan, Hope, Arkansas.

The committee in charge of the program and arrangements is composed of Drs. Don Smith, L. M. Lile and J. H. Weaver. Miss Harriet Story will be presented in several musical numbers.

Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third, fourth or fifth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs are one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins.

Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the blood. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

With Insurgents at Gate, Madrid Has 22d Cabinet Change

MADRID, Spain.—(AP)—Madrid, amid the crash of heavy cannonading and the continuous wail of air-raid sirens, virtually completed Wednesday a long-expected cabinet shakeup to give Syndicalists a share in the government.

The government reorganization, 22d since the fall of the monarchy in 1931, came at a most critical moment in the history of the republic.

Droves of insurgent planes circled back and forth over the capital in a continued assault on the morale of the civil population.

Black-Draught High In Quality Without Being High In Price

Black-Draught is "easy to pay for" because it is so economically packaged and so reliable.

But as to quality, there's nothing "cheap" about it. For instance, its principal active ingredient is the leaves of a certain species of plant that has brought 10,000 miles from where they grow to the factory where the medicine is made. These leaves from far, far away, help to give Black-Draught its well-known "laxative reliability." They could not be left out, or substituted, without real loss of good medicinal quality.

For a good, purely vegetable laxative, insist on Black-Draught. About 25 doses in each 25-cent package.

Amendments and Acts Favored by Arkansas Voters

233 Precincts Out of 2,000 Give Leads to All of Them

BUT NO. 1 IS CLOSE

Textbook Measure Lags Behind Others—Hempstead for All 5

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—On the basis of 233 precincts reporting out of 2,000 at 10:30 o'clock Tuesday night the three proposed constitutional amendments and one of the two initiative acts were apparently ratified by Arkansas voters.

The free textbook act, No. 1 had a favorable lead, but a comparatively narrow one.

Two hundred and thirty-three precincts gave as follows:

Amendment No. 22 (grand juries): For 10,384; against 2,287.

Amendment No. 23 (homestead tax exemption): For 9,132; against 5,837.

Amendment No. 25 (reapportionment): For 10,375; against 4,301.

Act No. 1 (free textbooks): For 8,853; against 6,332.

Act No. 3 (criminal code): For 12,389; against 2,862.

In the Seventh Congressional District Democrat Kitchens had 1,995 votes to Republican Jameson's 85.

The Hempstead Vote

Six of Hempstead county's 36 precincts on which The Star compiled complete unofficial returns Tuesday night gave Roosevelt 1,036 against 59 for Landon.

All proposed constitutional amendments and initiative acts were apparently being carried.

The tabulation, including all four Hope city boxes, Hope Country Box Five, and the Deanyville box, gave the following on the referendum matters:

Amendment No. 22 (grand juries): For 801; against 176.

Amendment No. 23 (homestead tax exemption): For 545; against 402.

Amendment No. 25 (reapportionment): For 650; against 295.

Act No. 1 (free textbooks): For 592; against 393.

Act No. 3 (criminal code): For 820; against 136.

Plan Spending of Stork Derby Prize

Only Hitch Is That Six Have Apparently Tied for the Money

TORONTO, Ont.—(AP)—If Mrs. Pauline Clarke gets one-sixth of Charles Vance Millar's $500,000 prize in the "stork derby," one of the first things that she is going to buy is a divorce, she said here Monday.

Mrs. Clarke, who is only 21, is one of the six mothers who apparently have tied for derby honors with nine children each in the last 10 years. Eight of Mrs. Clarke's children are living and five were born after she separated from her husband. All were registered, however, and the fact that they are illegitimate does not bar them from the contest under terms of Millar's will.

Since it became apparent that Mrs. Clarke had a chance to get part of the prize money, her husband has expressed a desire to become reconciled with her. However, Mrs. Clarke says that she will not consent. She says that she had wished all along to divorce her husband and to marry the man who is the father of her last five children. However, she said that her husband would not consent to a divorce.

What is worrying Mrs. Clarke and four of the other mothers who apparently are tied for first place honors is the fact that Mrs. Lily Kenny is determined to get all the prize money for herself. Notably Mrs. Kenny is tied with the other five mothers with nine babies, but she said that she had found the registrations of two other babies, bringing her total to 11 for the 10 years. She said that the babies had been registered under the name

Movie Villain in Hospital Interview

C. Henry Gordon Admits "There Is Something About Hospitals"

HOLLYWOOD.—The heavy hand been in the hospital, which presumably made him a light heavy. But C. Henry Gordon, man of a thousand villainies, was still in no position to terrorize with the story of his operation. He hadn't had an operation, truth to tell, and he admitted it. He had been laid low by incipient pneumonia.

By now every fan knows that all movie villains are angelic by disposition, that they love their homes, books, gardens, and children and wives if they have any. So it is scarcely necessary to remark that C. Henry Gordon, for all his sinfulness in "The Charge of the Light Brigade" as scheming Sura-Khum, is personally gracious, expensive and most affable. But there is something about hospitals.

Turned Brown By Brown Turner

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—(Special)—Trouble with these elections is both sides ask too many embarrassing questions. For instance, the Republicans want to know why there are still a lot of unemployed, and the Democrats want to know why Republicans didn't do something about it in the first place.

Father Coughlin wants to know why we don't jump on Mexico. Mr. Lenke wants to know why the Democrats allowed the drought. Mr. Thomas wants to know why things are not divided. Mr. Browder wants to know who threw those eggs and tomatoes at him, and Mr. Colvin complains because there are too many people who like a freeze nip. That nudist candidate leaped up before he got started, and the rest of us are so selfish we're voting for the party we think we can get the most from.

Two of Missouri Babies Are Reported in Serious Condition

SENATH, Mo.—(AP)—Mrs. Pearl Bridges, 35, wife of a southeast Missouri sharecropper, gave birth to quadruplets in her log-cabin home near here Monday night, but two of the tiny infants died Tuesday morning and the others fought an unequal battle for life.

Quadruplet-Birth

SENATH, Mo.—(AP)—Mrs. James Bridges gave birth to quadruplets in a two-room log cabin near here Monday night and her sharecropper husband fainted when Dr. F. W. Speidel told him the news.

The children, one boy and three girls, were born from 6:30 p. m. to 6:36. Two of the girls are in serious condition and Dr. Speidel said he was trying to obtain a nurse.

Dr. Speidel estimated weights of the babies at between two and three and one-half pounds each.

Roosevelt Victory Admitted by the Republican Press

Kansas City Star and Hearst's N. Y. American Concede It

G. O. P. STATEMENT

Executive Vice Chairman Gives Up Ghost at 9 p. m. Tuesday

Hearst Paper Concedes It
NEW YORK—(AP)—The New York American, one of a group of newspapers published by William Randolph Hearst, declares that President Roosevelt is re-elected, in its edition on the streets at 8:30 Tuesday night. Mr. Hearst continuously throughout the campaign urged the election of Governor Landon.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—(AP)—The Kansas City Star, which supported Landon for president, said in its first election edition Tuesday night, "Early returns from over the nation indicate a victory for landslide proportions for President Franklin D. Roosevelt in the electoral college vote."

Is End Near for Both Big Parties

Indications Appear of Vast Change in Line-up by 1940

By BYRON PRICE

After the 1936 elections, what? Does November 3 mark the end of the old Republican and Democratic parties, and is the long-awaited "re-alignment" now at hand?

Indications that such a change may come by 1940 are both numerous and impressive. Through two successful Presidential campaigns, political sentiment has appeared more fluid than raw alcohol, and political labels more easily changed than waistscoats.

Each of the leading parties is divided against itself by a schism too wide and deep for even the dullest eye to overlook. Winner and loser alike must look forward to dissension, turmoil and sorrow within.

Can the coalition which has been Mr. Roosevelt's support be held together when better times come, and can he and his friends retain control of the Democratic party machinery against the forces which already are seeking to deprive him of his party leadership?

Has Mr. Landon, or anyone else, the strength to reconstitute the Republican organization on a basis which will heal the wounds of 1932 and 1936, and hold out any real promise for the future?

These are searching questions, yet those who view politics philosophically will realize that they present but one side of the picture.

If American political history has established any law beyond dispute, it is that new parties are difficult to bring into being, and old parties hard to kill.

The end of almost every campaign in 50 years has been accompanied by prognostications of impending change, by funeral dirges sung by the prophets for one party or the other, or both. After 1936 nothing seemed more certain than that those Democrats who took a walk from the Bryan candidacy never would return, and that the days of glory for the party had passed forever.

After 1912 the only question about the Republican party was where the burial would take place. Four years later the Republican nominee missed election by an eyelash, and four years after that the party captured Washington for a 12-year tenure.

The act of springing from the ashes is one of the commonest political accomplishments on record. From this both the winning party and the losing party this November can take heart, for the election finds many of the past alignments on both sides levelled to the dust.

If new parties are to arise, to replace

Conservatives in England Winners

Laborites Lose Ground in Municipal Elections Monday

LONDON, Eng.—(AP)—Conservatives won sweeping victories at the expense of the Laborites in the municipal elections in England and Wales Monday. Labor, which had a majority of 42 of the 372 city and borough councils, in most instances lost the gains made in 1933.

Conservatives preached a program of retrenchment and economy. The elections were held to replace one-third of the membership of the councils. London boroughs were not involved. The London Council retires as a whole every three years and the next election for it will not be until next year.

The Scottish municipal elections are being held Tuesday.

Corn-Husking Test To Be Held Nov. 10

National Championship to Be Determined Near Newark, Ohio

NEWARK, O.—(AP)—The 1936 "world series" of the outstanding farm sports contest, the national corn-husking championship, comes to the 487-acre farm of Alva Oyer on the old National road 13 miles southwest of here, November 10.

Nature decreed a change of venue for this year's bang-board contest. Originally it was planned for Missouri, but the drought caused such poor corn there that the sponsors were afraid the small, unfilled ears would not hang long enough to keep the spectators interested. Hence, the decision for Ohio.

There will be 18 contestants—two from each of the corn belt states—Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Minnesota, South Dakota and Ohio. They represent the best in corn-husking—some places they call it corn-picking—in their respective states. Usually they are chosen in county and state elimination contests, but it is regarded likely this year's contestants from Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and possibly South Dakota, will be the same as last year, since no state contests are planned because of the drought.

Last year's national, held in Fountain county, Indiana, was won by Elmer Carlson, of Iowa. He established an all time record of 41.52 bushels, picking it within the allotted time of 80 minutes.

145 Ships Tied Up as Strike Spreads

Maritime Tieup Reaches Gulf Ports and Atlantic Coast

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif.—(AP)—The paralyzing grip of a general maritime strike closed tighter around coast shipping Monday night, sympathy walkouts sprang in Atlantic and Gulf ports, and the Maritime Commission indefinitely postponed an investigation here after union representatives walked out.

The number of strike-bound ships along the coast had reached at least 145 Monday night and others were due for the tie-ups as they reached ports from San Diego to Seattle.

Sailings of two large liners, one a transatlantic de luxe cabin vessel, the other one of America's largest merchantmen, were canceled in New York after "sit down" strikes by seamen.

New York shippers called a conference as sympathetic strikes spread in Gulf ports.

Up and down the coast, 37,000 union maritime workers were on strike, and the jobs of 20,000 lumbering employees were threatened by the tie-up in the Pacific Northwest.

Assistant Labor Secretary Edward F. McGrady said he had hopes of effecting a negotiating conference between seagoing unions and the coastwise freight operators.

These groups were making progress toward new agreements when the general maritime strike was called Thursday midnight by the Joint Negotiating Committee representing all the "solid front" marine unions.

The coastwise freight shippers are one of three employer groups; the others are the offshore operators, and the foreign and Eastern lines.

The ballot box, barometer of the people's will, suggested a strongly lopsided victory for President Roosevelt as substantial but still far from complete returns streamed in at midnight Tuesday.

In all but a handful of states the Democratic rooster was crowing loudly.

Some of Governor Landon's strongest supporters conceded his defeat. Others waited hopefully for late returns.

The weather-vane states of New York and Pennsylvania rolled up Roosevelt leads counted in the high thousands.

Through the Middle West and on the Pacific Coast other electoral votes nodded toward the Roosevelt column in profusion.

In three New England states—Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island—the Democratic ticket was ahead; and even in Landon's own home state of Kansas Roosevelt held a slight lead.

The New York Times announced Roosevelt's re-election. So did the New York American, a Landon supporter, as well as the Kansas City Star and the Chicago Tribune, both Landon supporters.

The Republican nominee held to a lead in only four states—Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Wyoming.

The great cities piled up tremendous totals for the New Deal.

Republican Chairman Hamilton refused to give up. Landon had nothing to say for the present.

Mr. Roosevelt was described as pleased.

By the Associated Press

At 11 p. m. Tuesday Roosevelt was leading in states having a total electoral vote of 516.

Landon was leading in states with an electoral vote of 15—Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Wyoming.

The Associated Press returns on 36 seats in the United States Senate, compiled to 11:30 p. m. Tuesday, showed: Democrats elected 10; holdovers 47—total Democrats 57.

Republicans elected one; holdovers 11—total Republicans 12.

Farmer—Laborites elected none; holdover one—total Farmer-Laborites one.

Seats still in doubt 25.

Necessary for majority 49.

Returns on 435 seats in the new House of Representatives compiled at 11:30 p. m. showed:

Democrats elected 80 (present congress 308, vacancies 19).

Republicans elected 5 (present congress 100, vacancies 4).

Progressives and Farm-Laborites elected none.

Seats still in doubt 350.

Necessary for majority 218.

Aluminum Cooking Vessels Do Not Cause Poisoning, Studies Reveal

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

Among the peculiar notions which have developed in recent years, and which seem to persist because of constantly active propaganda is the theory that the aluminum from cooking utensils in some manner poisons the human being or promotes growth of cancer in the human body.

This rumor persists notwithstanding reports to the contrary by important commissions set up to study the subject in Germany, England and the United States.

This rumor persists notwithstanding reports to the contrary by important commissions set up to study the subject in England, Germany, and the United States.

Actually, there is not the slightest evidence to support the charge. Investigations made in some important centers indicate that clean aluminum cooking utensils are attacked to an insignificant degree by foods that are of neutral reaction.

Acid foods or foods to which baking soda has been added may dissolve small amounts of aluminum from the cooking utensils. If, however, sugar is present the amount of corrosion of the metal is less.

The largest amount of aluminum found in any food after cooking was .18 parts per million in apple butter which had been cooked in an aluminum vessel for 6 1/2 hours. If all the food to be eaten in one day were cooked in an aluminum cooking utensil, there still would not be enough of the metal in the food to interfere seriously in any way with normal activities of the human body.

Occasionally, it would seem to be conceivable that materials coming from cooking utensils or from foods might produce unfavorable action in the human body. Thus, pieces of broken glass occasionally have been found in food substances, and foods have even been contaminated by splinters of wood, wire, nails, and other foreign bodies. These facts should indicate the necessity of careful control over food supplies.

Since chemical insecticides are used for destroying insect life on plants, poisonous materials occasionally find their way into food in this manner. Sprays of nicotine, tobacco dust, Paris green, and lead, as well as arsenic, frequently are used on growing fruits and vegetables.

Such poisons should, of course, be removed from fruits by thorough washing. In the case of vegetables such as lettuce and cabbage, it is possible to remove the outer leaves and then, by washing, to get rid of practically all the insecticide. It is not possible to do much about cleaning asparagus, except by washing thoroughly with suitable solutions.

A great deal of agitation has been associated with the sale of apples and oranges on which metallic sprays have been used. The U. S. Department of Agriculture has instituted definite regulations for control of insecticides used on such fruits.

Nevertheless, to be safe, you should thoroughly wash the indentation where the stem of the apple is attached, since rather large amounts of poisons may collect in such places.

No doubt, agricultural chemists will in the future be able to develop non-poisonous insecticides in quantities required to prevent deterioration in vegetables and in fruits.

I don't know what it was about. It struck me, that never yet in the U. S. A. have I seen a poster of an English king. Are they more interested in us than we are in them?

Will Miss Blaise of Autumn Trees

We came up the Thames into the city, or rather to the Silvertown docks several miles below London. What a river! Deep to the low banks where cows are grazing. Ocean liners go up right to the very edge in places. Most of the English people aboard had never seen that end of the Thames before. So you, who live in Philadelphia and have never seen New York, or who live in Los Angeles and have not junketed up to San Francisco, are not so different. Many New Yorkers have never troubled to take a ferry across the bay. That's the way the world is.

I think a certain amount of curiosity about the world, or at least the neighborhood in which we live, most justifiable. And it makes me think of the autumn woods in America. The trees are turning. When this article is published in the States, they will be at their most glorious blaze. If there are any woods within street car or bus distance, do take the children out. Many children have no idea what a bright red tree looks like. Alas, this year I shall miss them.

SALUTE TO Love

BEGIN HERE TODAY
KATE AND CAROLINE MEED live on a farm, Meed Meadows, with their indolent, lovable grandfather, MAJOR SAM MEED, and two old Negro servants, ALPHY and ZEKIE. Kate is engaged to MORGAN PRENTISS, who neglects her for beautiful and wealthy EVELYN ELWELL.

Major Meed loves the farm to JEFF HOWARD, a bitter young mountaineer. Kate hates Jeff for taking their home, but he, in spite of her insolent treatment, falls in love with her.

Kate rebuffs Morgan, just as he is on the point of lifting her for Evelyn. Kate and Caroline are unable to get jobs to augment their grandfather's pension money. Kate finds Brown Boy, her beloved horse, to a neighbor.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXIV
CAROLINE saw her as she entered the yard. "Why, Kate! she exclaimed. "I thought you rode. Whatever led you to walk on a day like this?"

"I rode to Mr. Grayson's," Kate answered evasively, "and back. I went up the road afterward."

"Oh, what made you do that? You knew I wanted to hear how Mr. Grayson took the letter?"

"He took it with his hands," Kate said idly. "She giggled like a person slightly tipsy."

Caroline remarked stiffly, "That's not funny. It's childish. What's the matter with you, Kate? You look queer!"

"I guess I'm due to look queer," Kate said slowly. She took the folded check from her pocket and spread it on the table. "I've just gotten us $350."

Caroline examined the check in amazement. "It's signed Thomas Hold. What on earth did you sell him?"

"Brown Boy!"

"Oh, Kate! There was protest in Caroline's voice, and regret, and self-accusation. She felt that she had somehow caused Kate to do this. Yet, as she stood thinking it over, she saw that she was not individually responsible for the sacrifice.

In town at that moment Jeff Howard was concluding some business at one of the banks. Here, at least, he felt at home, for bankers invariably regarded him with liking and respect. He had inquired at the bank about a certain breed of sheep he wished to stock and the cashier, who knew his county, directed him to Thomas Hold.

Jeff now found himself driving out the Mount Hebron road with a legitimate excuse for going that way.

In Tom Hold's barn lot he found the farmer and his 15-year-old son engaged in looking over a large brown riding horse. "I've just bought him for my boy," Mr. Hold explained. "Not two hours ago, it was."

Jeff scrutinized the horse. That brown-bay color, the star on the forehead. The two white hind feet. So Kate Meed had had to sell her horse. To Tom Hold he said bluntly, "I'm looking for a riding horse myself. Would you consider a re-sale?"

Mr. Hold pulled at his suspender. "My boy took a fancy to that horse last year, but he wasn't for sale at the time. Yeah, Ralph's wanted Brown Boy for some time. He'd not want to sell him, I reckon."

Jeff said casually, "I could offer you a reasonable profit. What did you pay for him, Mr. Hold?"

"Three-fifty," said the farmer, who was known as an honest man. "Maybe your boy'd be satisfied with about a $50 turnover instead of the horse. I'll give you four hundred cash."

Mr. Hold took his son aside and was seen to argue with him. Presently they returned and the boy said a bit sullenly, "All right. Take him, Pop says I can have the fifty profit."

In many flocks there are some birds that are slow in coming into production according to S. A. Moore, Extension poultryman, College of Agriculture University of Arkansas. A moist mash fed at mid-day will help to correct this situation. Simply add milk or water to the laying mash. This mixture should be of a crumbly consistency (not sloppy) and should be fed in limited quantities. Feed the amount the birds will consume in 15 to 20 minutes.

This same treatment will help to rush old hens through their molt.

Part of the Christmas dinner is already in the making in many homes of Hempstead county, since everyone knows that the longer a fruit cake ripens the better it is. Fruit cake, Arkansas style, can be a very inexpensive part of the holiday feast.

Home-grown substitutes can be used for many expensive materials that go into fruit cake. Last year at least 25 county women made fruit cakes following the recipe of Miss Gertrude E. Conant, extension nutritionist, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture, which utilizes materials to be found at home.

Pecanuns can be substituted for dates; candied orange and grape fruit peel can be made at home; and several kinds of preserves can be used. Preserved watermelon rind or ripe cucumber rind is a good substitute for citron. Another recipe, tried and tested by Miss Conant, is for a pork fruit cake, using fat salt pork.

Copies of these recipes can be obtained at the office of the home demonstration agent.

Mrs. Riley Lewallen, exhibited an Arkansas Christmas fruit cake in the Green Laseater home demonstration club booth on the county Achievement day program October 17. The Green Laseater club featured Christmas gifts from the pantry shelf and other products of the home.

and the embargo becomes effective automatically. The act was applied in the Italo-Ethiopian conflict, although war never was declared.

Nowhere in the court proceedings is the neutrality act mentioned. Moreover, since the Chaco war is ended, that act, for all future use, is as dead as a dodo. But the government is prosecuting the alleged violation with deadly seriousness. There are bigger stakes than the possibilities of a $10,000 fine and somebody going to jail for a couple of years.

"Dear Dark Head," History of Ireland

When the British rulers of Ireland back in the spacious days of great Elizabeth and herabouts, wrote Irish poets and historians to order no more about wronged Ireland, they unintentionally did the Irish cause a considerable service.

For the Irish writers invented marvelously poetic pseudonyms for their beloved nation. She became Dark Rosaleen, Kathleen in Houlihan, and Dear Dear Head; and under these names she kept alight the fire which, after many bitter years, was to bring Ireland out on the high road to freedom.

"Dear Dark Head," by Helen Landreth (Whitlsey House: $2.75), is a compact history of the Irish nation, from its beginnings in the midst of fable to its present interesting status. It is written with a full appreciation for the romantic and picturesque qualities involved, and it makes an excellent bit of reading.

Reading it, you discover—with a sense of shock, if you have had your Irish history from English sources—that a tragic record of the story of the English occupation has been. Mr. De Valera's insistence on the most minute forms of independence seems natural and admirable, instead of stubborn and doctrinaire, when put against its proper background.

The great names of the Irish fight are all here—O'Connell, Parnell, Wolfe Tone, and all the rest. Miss Landreth tells her story with a fine sense of indignation at long-continued wrong, and communicates her indignation to the reader. One wishes her book were longer.

of Paris." Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur have taken silly bit parts in the pictures they have done.

If you saw "Doris" and you saw William Wyler, the director. He hurried a costume and Miss Landreth mad as the first violinist in the orchestra in the restaurant scene. I must add that Mr. Wyler really is an accomplished musician.

Eddie Buzzell, one-time musical comedy actor, goes into every picture he directs. So does Al Santell, whose last was "Wintered." Henry Koster, now directing "Three Smart Girls," promised his mother in Vienna that he'd appear in all his American pictures so she could see how he's looking.

Mrs. Wallis Simpson, co-fidante of England's King Edward VIII, was born in the United States. Lola Montez, intimate of Bavaria's King Ludwig I, died in the United States. Thus, in both these royal romances—Mrs. Simpson's today and Lola Montez in 1848—Americans have felt far more than casual interest. It's the story of the latter that Willis Thornton tells today in the fifth of six articles entitled "When a King Loves—"

By WILLIS THORNTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
The wildest, weirdest, waywardest woman who ever cost a king his crown was certainly Lola Montez.

She had three things: great beauty, love of living, and crust.

They elevated her from an obscure name of Lola Montez and a fictitious Spanish ancestry, and prepared for the stage.

Her debut as a Spanish dancer was a flop, partly because she couldn't dance much, partly because disappointed suitors recognized her and hissed the attempted deception. Other stage attempts were no more encouraging.

She didn't stop Lola. She told a friend: "I am sick of being told that I can't dance. I am going to carry out my original plan; that is, trying to hook a prince."

Locked Her Up to Escape Her
With the remains of her dwindling money she started on a tour of the continent. Brussels, Berlin, Dresden, Warsaw, St. Petersburg. She danced, she accepted help from whatever gaudy gentlemen were willing to give it in exchange for her favor, she put up a magnificent front.

At Dresden she engaged in a brief affair of heart with Franz Liszt, the pianist and composer, from which he fled shortly, leaving her locked in a room so she could not follow.

In Poland she repulsed the advances of the aged dictator Paskewich, started a small riot in which some 300 and Paskewichs and pro-Lolus were arrested, and was then run out of the country.

For a time King Henry the 12nd of Reuss was her patron, but Lola's dependent ways offended him, and she was again run out of the country. She made a brief place for herself at the court of the Czar of Russia, and then returned westward to Paris of Louis Philippe, of Dumas, George Sand and Gautier.

There Lola came as near to falling in love as it is likely she ever did. She took up with Alexander Henri Dujarier, a young and handsome journalist, but he became involved in a soldier's daughter to be the mistress of a king, whose crown she certainly helped to topple off, and dropped her to an obscure grave in Brooklyn, N. Y.

While his courtiers were arguing over whether to admit her, Lola Montez (above) rushed into the presence of Ludwig I, King of Bavaria. After the informal introduction sketched below, he told intimates he was "bewitched."

It is quite true that the aging King Ludwig I of Bavaria might have lost his crown anyway in the uprisings of the chaotic year 1848 in Europe. But Lola certainly juggled it into the final tumble.

Born in Ireland but Assumed Spanish Nationality
There are so many dizzy stories about Lola Montez, many of the dirtiest told by herself, that people begin to doubt even the true ones. As though the truth wasn't dizzy enough! Her story runs about like this:

Maria Dolores Eliza Rosanna Gilbert was born in Limerick, Ireland, in 1818. Her father, a soldier, took the family to India on service, and there died of cholera.

Dolores (Lola) is the diminutive form) clashed with her half-Spanish mother when the latter tried to marry her to an aged judge. The young girl impetuously married a young Lieutenant Thomas James. Morals at the Indian station left something to be desired, and the young wife was soon estranged both from her husband and her mother. From the lieutenant she got a separation, from her mother a final disownment.

With the settlement money she went to London, took from thin air the quarrel with a rival journalist and in a stupid duel he was killed. The rest less Lola moved feverishly on to adventure in Spain, and thence to Germany.

Ludwig I an Easy Victim
What she had heard of King Ludwig I, the aging "liberal king" who fancied himself a connoisseur of art and beauty, helped Lola to decide. While courtiers argued over whether she ought to be admitted, Lola simply burst into the royal presence.

One look at those lustrous eyes, about whose color (blue of black?) no observer ever agreed, was enough for the king. A few days later he remarked helplessly: "I can't understand it, but I am bewitched."

Once again the old story: Ludwig queen had to take a back seat while Lola, probably more by accident than by deep conviction, Lola became identified with the liberal anti-clerical party, and the cry of St. Loyola vs. St. Lola was heard in violent argument in the streets. Under her advice the king removed education from the discretion of the Jesuits, and dismissed the whole ministry.

When he named Lola countess of Lansfeld, Baroness von Rosenthal, and countess of the Order of St. Theresa, gave her an income of 30,000 florins a year, and installed her in a new

Slapstick Comedy Recaptures Films

Even the Leading Players Don't Mind Getting "Mussed Up"

By ROBERT COONS
Associated Press Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD—Hollywood's latest film cycle is insanity. Only the actor who is willing to embrace lunacy has a ghost of a show in it. The celluloid-laddled cells are waiting.

"My Man Godfrey," among recent films, stepped up the pace of an insidious race (for the Crown of Nuts) begun some two years ago, perhaps, by "The Thin Man" and "It Happened One Night." The senseless, practically reasonless lunacy of the Carol Lombard-William Powell picture served to remind that the paying customers welcome—nay, love—ridiculous goings-on.

A triumph of the unexpected came when Myrna Loy made her first entrance, flat on her face, in "The Thin Man." Myrna loved it, and audiences roared, and now the actress who can take a fall or be on the receiving end of a custard pie in a role begins right away to think of tearing out the old swimming pool and building an indoor ocean.

"Tsk, Tsk" Five Years Ago
Five years ago the movie pretty who would let her carefully curled coiffure be disarranged by anything so vulgar as slapstick didn't live—at least out here she didn't. In "Love On the Run" Joan Crawford, one of the glamor girls, is caressed full on the face by a plate of jelly, neatly hurled by one of her snufflers. She also appears in a most unglamorous "stratosphere suit" with Clark Gable.

"Libeled Lady," one of the year's nuttiest comedies, has William Powell in a trout-fishing sequence taking one fall after another in the trout stream for hilarity's sake. As for glamor, Jean Harlow has a scene in a permanent-waving apparatus, her face mud-packed. The whole picture is moon-struck.

"The Gay Desperado" is another. Nine Martini sips, but more than that he snufflers. His big love scene with Ida Lupino is a knock-down-and-drag-out fight. The whole production strikes the giddy note, a cross between satire, burlesque, romance, and high comedy.

Fans Helped Bring It
All Hollywood has become Marxian—not after the social philosopher but like the Marx brothers. The new Lily Pons picture has Gene Raymond, Jack Oakie, Mischka Auer, and Frank Jenks in all manner of farce, with Lily herself a lively participant.

In short, any farce comedy nowadays seems to be built to "top" in unexpected absurdity its immediate predecessors. How it will end no one dares to predict. The why of it?

"Just another cycle," say some. But others see in it Hollywood's successful effort to intrigue public fancy. The public, even hereabouts, had taken to "tubing" pictures made to cut-and-dried formula. Fans have been so cruel, at some of the colony's least impressive junk, as to "talk back" to the actors, to take the trite words out of their mouths, and otherwise to demonstrate that they know all the answers.

And lunacy is safe. Its effectiveness lies in its startling unexpectedness. What fan can predict what will happen next in a Hollywood insane asylum?

Follow the Leader--If You Can!

They're a bit impatient—Cecile in front, at least—but with the aid of Dr. Dufoc and their two nurses the Dionne quins soon will be off for a brisk round of follow-the-leader. Annette is last in line, back of Emilie. In the center is Marie, and in front of her Yvonne, who is using her right hand to advantage while clinging to Cecile's coat.

The quintuplets get off to a good start in follow-the-leader, with Cecile at the lead of the file, when suddenly one of them misses the fifth member of the party. Where's Annette? Ah, there she is, taking her own time in the rear. So the four, Emilie, Marie, Yvonne and Cecile, halt the procession for the tardy Annette.

"One, two, three, four, five little Indians!" went the nursery rhyme. But one "little Indian," Annette, lagged behind, so now there are four. That's what happened to the Dionne quintuplets when they played follow-the-leader. So here we see, left to right, Emilie, Marie, Yvonne and last, Cecile, pulling away at the head of the train.

25th Anniversary of Self-Starter

Invention by Kettering, It Started Automobiles on Real Boom

This year marks the 25th anniversary of the practical application of the electric self-starter to automobiles and plans are under way to take note of the event in New York in connection with the annual automobile shows in mid-November.

Charles F. Kettering, now Vice President of the General Motors Corporation in Charge of Research, developed the self-starter in 1911, working with a loyal band of helpers under severe handicaps in the barn which served as the first "factory" and "executive offices" of the Dayton Engineering Laboratories Company.

The self-starter was applied first by Henry M. Leland to Cadillac cars and became standard Cadillac equipment in 1912. On the strength of this epochal improvement, Cadillac that year won the famous Dewar Trophy in London for the second time. Soon other makes of automobiles were equipped and the rapid expansion of the automobile industry followed. The self-starting mechanism made motoring safer, easier and cleaner and, in particular, met the driving needs of women.

Hamilton Dividend Gains 25 Per Cent

Quarterly Distribution for October 31 Is Announced Here

An advance bulletin to Orville W. Erringer, state manager for Hamilton Depositors corporation, announces a substantial increase in the quarterly dividend distribution payable on October 31, 1936 to all holders of Hamilton Trust Certificates. According to word just received by Mr. Erringer the dividend for this quarter will be 1.66 cents for each Hamilton Trust Share, an increase of 25 per cent over the dividend paid at this time last year. This is the largest October dividend distribution in the company's history. It is the eighth consecutive dividend which has been paid.

The contents of the President's Quarterly Report in the current issue released by E. A. Jones, President of the Hamilton Depositors Corporation traces substantial improvement in the 30 great corporations underlying the Hamilton Trust Fund. Third quarter output for the electric power division of the portfolio shows increased sales of current of 14 per cent for United Gas Improvement Company, 18 per cent for Detroit Edison Company, and 18 per cent for Consolidated Edison Company of New York. In the railroad division, a 14 per cent gain in gross revenues was reported by Union Pacific, and a 60 per cent increase in earnings per share for the first nine months of the year was tabulated for the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Further large increases were scored by United States Steel, now operating within 50 per cent of capacity and expanding their plant facilities in the south. Also National Biscuit with increased earnings of 42 per cent, in the south. Also National Biscuit with increased earnings of 42 per cent. General Electric which is running 6 per cent ahead of last year, United Fruit with a gain of 44 per cent for the first nine months of this year. DuPont has gained more than 60 per cent, and Union Carbide is enjoying their best season since 1929. Sears Roebuck which recently declared an extra dividend of $1.75 per share is expected to repeat with another extra during the next quarter and possibly to issue rights.

According to information released to Mr. Erringer the current market value of the Hamilton Trust Fund amounts to $1,351,800 as of October 24, 1936, a growth of more than 100 per cent in the last year.

Alabama, Tulane Battle Holds Spotlight

Winner May Get Rose Bowl Call

Sutherland Picks Crimson Tide As Favorite Over Tulane

By JOCK SUTHERLAND
Head Coach, University of Pittsburgh
PITTSBURGH, Pa.—(NEA)—Seldom have contenders for the mythical national football championship dropped by the wayside in such wholesale lots as they have this season. So great have been the casualties that in the first week of November there are only a handful of undefeated squads in the nation.

This week-end the way already is cleared for selection of a Rose Bowl candidate and that team may be the winner of the Alabama-Tulane game in Birmingham.

The Crimson Tide may be a slight favorite in this game chiefly because of the fact that Frank Thomas' team has come on fast since its tie with Tennessee.

Joe Riley may furnish the spark in this contest that the Tide wants above any, and it will take all the strength of the Green Wave, at a peak much sooner under its new coach, Lowell (Red) Dawson, than many expected, to push back the Red Elephants' attack.

Tulane, in Bucky Bryan, has a great performer and his duel with Riley for individual honors will make the game a great attraction.

Other games in the south find Auburn and Louisiana State, both undefeated in Southern Conference play, but having ties on their records, battling stiff foes. Auburn must get by Georgia Tech. The Engineers hit a midseason slump, and unless they can come out of it, Auburn will move a little closer to a sectional title.

L. S. U. gets rugged Mississippi State, which, although always dangerous, is likely to lose after pressing the Tigers.

North Carolina State makes an inter-sectional trip to Boston College, and is likely to make the return journey a bit disappointed.

Irish Over the Navy
In the east, Navy and Notre Dame probably offer the prize card. Both defeated, they nevertheless put up one of the greatest annual games in the schedules. The way it stacks up, the Irish probably will be favored, but Navy will be tough if Sneed Schmid breaks loose.

Michigan meets Penn in Philadelphia. The Quakers, stronger than in years, and with a higher morale, are the pick over the Wolverines, despite the latter's great inter-sectional record. Fordham and Purdue get together in New York, and the Ram, because of its great defense, is favored.

Columbia and Dartmouth engage at Hanover. I like Earl Blaik's Dartmouth Indians in this one, although Columbia, despite its losses, is due to get set for any one team, watch out!

Holy Cross stacks up against Colgate, and right now Andy Kerr's lateral attack must be given the edge over the Crusaders, who have shown nothing in the way of an offense this season.

In other eastern games, Yale shouldn't have a lot of trouble with Brown, Princeton's powerhouse seems to be too much for Cornell's sophomores, and I'm afraid that Penn State doesn't look as dangerous to Pitt as it did a month ago.

Still, this is THE game for the Lions, and we have to guard against the situation that prevailed in the game with Duquesne.

Kentucky is too powerful for Manhattan in their scheduled New York game, Harvard should take Virginia, and Carnegie Tech should prevail over New York University, although the Tartans will have to guard against taking the game too lightly.

Winning Plays of 1936

By ART KRENZ
NEA Service Sports Artist
Michigan won its first game since the Pennsylvania engagement of last fall by scoring the first of its two touchdowns against Columbia with the superbly veiled play diagrammed above.

On his touchdown sprint from the 11-yard line in the battle with the Lion, Cedric Sweet, running from an unbalanced line and behind grand interference, sneaked off by himself on a wide slant to score the first touchdown in the far corner of the end zone. Columbia men tackled practically every other man on the field.

Sweet took the ball from Center Rinaldi, and followed Quarterback Barclay through a hole made between guard and center. Barclay took out Furey, backing up the line. Captain Patanelli, Michigan left end, interfered with Siegel, Columbia right end, and went on to block out Bonom.

Smithers went down and blocked out Hudasky, while Smick, right end, circled around to account for Luckman, the safety man. Hook circled the Columbia right end wide, first as a decoy, and then to go down field to be in position to give Sweet further assistance.

Linemen looked after their assignments perfectly, with a tackle taking out Hersey, a back-up.

SMITHERS VEILED MICHIGAN PLAY WHICH BEAT COLUMBIA AND WON'D WELL AGAINST ILLINOIS.

Young Rockne Learning Football On Rock-Strewn Field With Squad of 14

Son of Famous Football Coach Expects To Enter Notre Dame As Freshman In Autumn of 1937—Weighs 145 Pounds

By HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Sports Writer

Young Knute Rockne is learning football the hard way—on a rock-strewn field as a member of a squad of 14.

The youngster with the most famous name in football says that he will not be awfully disappointed if he doesn't crash the Notre Dame varsity in 1938. "I'd like to make the team, of course," says the yellow-haired Knute Rockne of today. "Who wouldn't? But when you weigh only 145 and there are dozens just as fast and a darned sight bigger, you can't expect the coach to pay much attention to you."

Jack Bell, his favorite Florida operative, passes this story of young Knute Rockne on to me. Young Knute is a back with the Miami Military Academy team.

"With only 14 of us out, we haven't had much chance to scrimmage," explains young Knute. "Two of the 14 come out only when they don't want to go swimming. We scrimmaged another team the other day. It was pretty bad. You see, if we scrimmage much on this field we get all bruised by the rocks. And if someone gets hurt we'll not have enough boys to make up a team."

Recognizes Talent
Like his illustrious father, young Knute recognizes a football player when he sees one.

"We've got one boy who's going to make the folks take a look," he asserts. "He's a long-legged kid named Roositer."

Young Knute's array has just three substitutes, including two boys who'd rather go swimming, and a Cuban lad who doesn't know what it's all about and isn't quite sure whether he wants to play.

At Notre Dame, the institution made famous in football by the other Knute Rockne, 185 young men attempted to make the team this fall. No less than 11 of them appeared in a single contest—against Wisconsin.

But things were not always like that at Notre Dame. After Gus Dorais and Rockne popularized the forward pass as players, Rockne had something of a struggle as coach of his alma mater. Rockne served as his own trainer for several years, and sold tickets, too.

The immortal George Gipp, the Four Horsemen, and the rest helped to sweep Rockne to the pinnacle of his profession and keep him there until his untimely death, but the great Dane paved the way for them.

Young Rockne's Early Lessons
"I remember how dad used to have somebody from the team—several of them—at the house for supper nearly every night," young Knute reminisces. "My brother Bill and I couldn't butt into the conversation, but we'd sit around and listen. They always talked football. We'd eat, and then they would start talkin' about that week's interference, sneak off by himself on a wide slant to score the first touchdown in the far corner of the end zone. Columbia men tackled practically every other man on the field.

Smithers went down and blocked out Hudasky, while Smick, right end, circled around to account for Luckman, the safety man. Hook circled the Columbia right end wide, first as a decoy, and then to go down field to be in position to give Sweet further assistance.

Linemen looked after their assignments perfectly, with a tackle taking out Hersey, a back-up.

SMITHERS VEILED MICHIGAN PLAY WHICH BEAT COLUMBIA AND WON'D WELL AGAINST ILLINOIS.

Northwestern On Top of Grid List

Replace Minnesota Team As Nation's Highest Ranking Outfit

NEW YORK—(AP)—Northwestern display Minnesota Monday as the No. 1 college team in the national football ranking poll conducted by the Associated Press.

Majority support was swayed by the Wildcats 6 to 0 triumph that snapped the Gophers' winning streak but many experts apparently were not satisfied as to Northwestern's superiority, all things considered, and voted their opinions accordingly. As one expressed it: "Without taking anything away from Northwestern, I still think Minnesota is the better club."

Notwithstanding the mixture of sentiment, 31 of the 43 contributors to this week's poll rated Northwestern at the top of their "first ten" to give the Wildcats a total of 412 points.

The experts rated Northwestern No. 1 with the Gophers taking second place in the consensus with a total of 317 points. The other two place votes went to Fordham's Rams, who jumped to third place in the national standing.

| First ten—         | Pts. |
|--------------------|------|
| 1. Northwestern    | 412  |
| 2. Minnesota       | 317  |
| 3. Fordham         | 227  |
| 4. Marquette       | 212  |
| 5. Pittsburgh      | 191  |

Mrs. Annie Smith, one of the nine-baby mothers, says that if she gets one-sixth of the prize, she will let her husband, Alfred, a fireman, make a voyage back to his native England. Alfred says that he is going to hang onto his job even if his wife does get one-sixth of the $500,000. He likes being a fireman.

Mrs. John Nagle and Mrs. Arthur Timleck, two other members of the nine-baby sextet, propose to contribute $5,000 of the prospective prize money as a fund for the mothers who have had only eight children during the 10-year period. They believe that the other four should contribute similar sums.

The sixth, Mrs. Isobel MacLean, whose entry became known only a few days before the derby closed last Saturday, is not so loquacious.

"With a family of 11 to provide for, we will find plenty of uses for the money," she said.

The Magic Ring of Gold

ALBERICH, disappointed in love, and dazzled by the gleam of the "Rhine gold" in the depths of the earth, sought power over the universe by ownership of this fortune, especially the gold ring that meant renunciation of love.

But Wotan, ruler Walhalla, abode of the gods, was jealous of this power. Two giants were dispatched to capture Alberich and obtain the ring for Wotan. By guile and strength, they brought the unfortunate prince of the Nibelungs, dwarfs of the nether regions, to Wotan. But for pay the giants demanded the ring. Wotan had to yield, then one giant killed the other to gain possession of the fatal circlet.

This is the introduction to the famous "trilogy" of music dramas for which the great German composer, Richard Wagner, is famous. It is called "Das Rheingold," and is pictured on one of the stamps which Germany issued in 1933, depicting Wagner's great operas.

Another outstanding engineering honor will be paid Ambrose Swasey, above, on Dec. 2 in New York, when the Cleveland manufacturer will receive the Hoover medal, given "by engineers to a fellow engineer for distinguished service." Swasey, who will be 90 on Dec. 19, has been a maker of machine tools and precision instruments for 67 years.

The contestants move between two rows, picking from both and tossing the ears into wagons which keep pace alongside them. The bank-boards are

No coaching from the sidelines is allowed and penalties are charged against contestants leaving more than five ounces of husk on one hundred pounds, and for ears overlooked on stalks.

No Scrimmage for Porkers This Week

Coach Thomsen Wants His Team In Shape For Rice Battle Saturday

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark.—(AP)—Coach Fred Thomsen banned scrimmage for the remainder of the week Monday as the University of Arkansas started drilling for their game with Rice Institute here Saturday.

The Porkers came out their victory over Texas A&M Saturday without injuries, and are expected to be in top shape against the Owls.

Head Coach Fred C. Thomsen handed the squad a new set of scoring plays Monday. They have scored 46 points in three Southwest conference games. Arkansas has scored only two victories to eight for the Owls in their long series. One game ended in a tie.

No Injury Allis for Owls
HOUSTON, Tex.—(AP)—Coach Jimmy Kitts gave his Rice Owls a holiday Monday, but warned them it wasn't all big heartedness.

"It's just a day's rest so we can go to work in a big way Tuesday," he said. "We want to be ready for a long, rough-tough blocking session by Wednesday and will have plenty of hard work this week getting ready for Arkansas."

The Owls came out of the George Washington game, which they won, 12 to 6, without serious injuries, and a long string of players, particularly in the backfield, who had been out from injuries several days will be ready to meet the Razorbacks at Fayetteville.

The Owls leave Friday night for the Ozarks.

the old, where are they to originate? The usual line of argument is that one of the new parties would be liberal, the other conservative. They presupposes a clear line of distinction and definition, which every student of practical politics knows to be nonexistent.

Will the liberty league become the conservative party, and the newly-projected left-wing labor movement the liberal party? Or will a major party develop from the operations of Father Coughlin, or Dr. Townsend, or Mr. Lemke? Certainly there is not the slightest sign of any of these things today.

The situation is ominous, it is true. It is one of those cases where it appears that anything may happen. But no one who thinks the problem out will be inclined to express positive opinions to be skeptical, and wait and see.

TOPPING PERFORMERS IN HORSE SHOW

Horses and skilled riders from all parts of the world are topping the timbers in New York in preparation for the International Horse Show, Nov. 4-10. Here are three of the performers who'll ride in the annual classic. Upper left is Capt. Eduardo Yanez, of the Chilean army team, taking a barrier on Chilena. At right is Lieut. J. O. Curtis, of the United States army team, clearing an obstacle on Rinzo. Below left is Mrs. John Hay Whitney, noted horsewoman, showing excellent form as she takes Gray Knight over a jump. A team of Canadian mounted police will add color to the show.

Kingsford-Smith Started Trail-Blazing Parade of Daring Flyers Across Pacific

This is the last of three stories portraying man's dauntless struggle to conquer the Pacific.

By PAUL FRIGGENS

NEA Service Staff Correspondent

A weather-hardened, nervously alert young fellow leaned out of the cockpit of his trimotored plane at Brisbane, the sunny morning of June 9, 1928, and requested:

"Please, a cigarette."

He was Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, fatigued but still polite after 7500 miles flying from California to Australia—the first air crossing of the Pacific.

Smith and three companions, Capt. Charles P. T. Ulm, Harry W. Lyon, and James W. Warner, had zoomed away from the Oakland airport in the Southern Cross at 87 miles an hour early May 31.

Back of them lay months of meticulous preparation; ahead of them, the still unconquered, uncharted Pacific. Twenty-seven hours, 25 minutes later the Southern Cross settled down at Behind each triumphal journey of the mighty Clipper ships across the Pacific ocean lies a vast sum of hard work by trained men stationed along the route. This photo shows the ground crew at Wake Island laboriously towing a barge-load of supplies across coral reefs to shore.

Modern hotels, equipped to accommodate passengers and crews of ships on stopovers, have been built at Clipper bases across the Pacific. Above is the Pan American Airway Inn, a new part of the Wake Island skyline. Below, an airline attaché holds an observation balloon used in calculating weather forecasts at Midway Island. This information is relayed to Clippers along the route.

Wheeler Field, Honolulu, the first leg of 2404 miles completed. The next stop was Suva in the Fiji islands, 3144 miles from Honolulu. The last stretch, 1700 miles to Brisbane, was flown continuously.

That in sketchy retrospect is the story of the greatest airplane flight ever made to that time.

Zeppelin Spans Ocean

From that date the conquest of the Pacific moved apace. The next attack came from the German dirigible Graf Zeppelin on its remarkable globe-circling trip in 1929.

It took off August 23 from Tokyo and early the morning of August 26 its great bulk cast shadows over the Los Angeles airport, to record the first non-stop flight across the Pacific.

Two years later, in June, 1931, another round-the-world flight, this time by airplane, spanned the Pacific again. Wiley Post and Harold Gatty in the monoplane Winnie Mae crossed from Siberia to a point near Nome, Alaska.

Later, in July, 1933, Post was to cross the Pacific alone via the same northern route, on a record-smashing, globe-circling flight.

October, 1931, found Hugh Herndon, Jr., New York socialite, and Clyde Pangborn, old-time barnstormer, landing in Japan on a projected round-the-world flight.

Win Japanese Prize

The Japanese newspaper Tokio Asahi offered $25,000 for the first successful non-stop flight to America. Herndon and Pangborn took off October 3 and landed 41 hours later at Wenatchee, Wash.—4558 miles distance—to chalk up the first non-stop trans-Pacific flight.

In January, 1934, the United States Navy launched a beautiful and well-organized mass flight of six naval patrol planes, which flew from San Francisco to Honolulu in formation.

These planes were equipped with the latest instruments. They carried skilled personnel.

Above all, they were flying boats capable of withstanding forced landings at sea and able to take off when repairs were effected.

Kingsford-Smith Again

And then, on the morning of November 4, out of the empty curve of sea and sky into which he had vanished six years before, Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith returned to San Francisco from Australia.

He came through a vast sweep of offshore muck with his navigator, Capt. P. G. Taylor, and emerged to a bright, clear dawn at the Oakland airport, his Lady Southern Cross touching earth at 7:44 a. m. to make him all-time veteran air pilot of the Pacific.

He had crossed first, and in both directions. A year later he was to hop off on one more try at the record he had broken twice before, the flying mark between England and Australia, but he was never to return. He belongs today to the company of trail-blazers.

Similarly in December, 1934, Lieut. Charles P. T. Ulm and two companions, J. Leon Skilling and George Littlejohn, soared into the skies, never to be seen again. Ulm left San Francisco, Australia bound, December 3, was forced down the next day without sighting land, his fuel exhausted. Investigation since has indicated that his navigation was at fault.

Amelia Soles Across

The search for Ulm had hardly ended, however, when blond Amelia Earhart swooped down on San Francisco at the end of a trans-Pacific flight which made the whole world wonder.

She had flown from Honolulu to California in 18 hours and 16 minutes—the first solo ever made across the Pacific.

"I'm not tired," she said, "but I'm

Here's Story of Electoral College

Members Are Elected by the People to "Elect" a President

By CHARLES NORMAN

Associated Press Correspondent

NEW YORK —(AP)—The college of electors doesn't have a football team, but it's a famous institution.

That's because when the sovereign people of the United States go to the polls to elect a president, they only elect the electors who elect the president. The electors themselves can't do anything about it until they've been notified of their election by the secretaries of state of their respective states.

It's all very complicated, particularly article XII of the constitution which provided this method of choosing the chief executive, but it works out pretty smoothly, and a good time is had by all, particularly the electors. As awfully dirty."

Miss Earhart's flight was notable as the first long distance flight in which radio telephone was used.

That was January 12, 1935. In April the Clipper made its first San Francisco-Hawaii round trip—the forerunner of today's scheduled airmail, express, and passenger service to the Orient.

The final conquest of the mighty Pacific was at hand.

for the sovereign people, practically everybody, in the United States will know the night of November 3 who has been elected, although it won't be official until the college of electors says so. And it won't "talk" until the first Monday after the second Wednesday in December.

Textbooks, guidebooks, the constitution itself failed to make the functions of an elector clear; it was therefore necessary to track one down. This has been done. The result makes it plain that the life of an elector is not an unhappy one.

Honored above his fellow party members, he is notified by the state committee that he has been appointed an elector. He thereupon becomes a member of perhaps the most exclusive college enrollment in the country, if not the world. The college of electors consists of 531 men and women, or equal the number of senators and representatives. In some states the electors' names go on the ballot.

Comes election day. When the votes have been tabulated, the secretary of state of his state notifies the elector of his election as second communication tells him what to do about it. He can hardly wait, but wait he does for the forms must be observed.

On the first Monday after the second Wednesday in December he says good-bye to kith and kin. He takes a train to the state capital. He meets his fellow electors, strikes up friendships. All pose for pictures. There is a luncheon, en masse. The governor may receive them as honored guests.

The amenities observed, the electors hold an organization meeting, choose a chairman and are called to order. Each elector is given a ballot.

Now comes the most momentous moment in the career of an elector. One of them puts the President in nomination. As each man casts his vote he signs the rolls. (Sometimes engraved ballots are kept as souvenirs.)

Once more there is a nomination—for the vice president. Again the electors cast their ballots and sign the roll.

Thereupon all receive checks for their expenses from the secretary of state. They shake hands all around and "drop in to see me some time" is heard, or perhaps—"I'm catching the 4:15; can you make it?"

The rest of the job devolves upon the secretary of state who sends the certified ballots to the secretary of State at Washington for transmission to the two houses of congress in their joint session. There the ballots are tabulated by states.

But while the elector's job is over after he has voted, his fun may continue. In 1933, all the electors in the union were invited to attend the inaugural ceremonies at the capital as special guests of honor, the first time in the
